Offered January 14, 2026

Prefiled January 13, 2026

Commending the Wiccocomico Pinn lineage of Northumberland County; recognizing documented leadership, descendant families, and land continuity; and honoring the contributions of Gail Janeen Smith Toliver, the Northern Neck Indigenous Heritage Council, and the Northern Neck Indigenous Heritage Foundation.

Patron—Stuart

WHEREAS, the Wiccocomico people of Virginia, distinct from the similarly named Maryland Wicomico, occupied ancestral homelands along the lower Northern Neck, including the north bank of Dividing Creek in present-day Northumberland County, as documented in early colonial maps and records; and

WHEREAS, Captain John Smith, in 1608, recorded the Wiccocomico among the Indigenous peoples of Virginia and described Virginia Indians as having tawny brown skin, lighter than the Moors or slaves and darker than the Irish or Spaniards, establishing early English recognition of their distinct Indigenous identity; and

WHEREAS, William Strachey, secretary of the Virginia colony, further described Wiccocomico and allied Virginia Indian families, noting that infants were carried on their mothers' backs and that children were born with white skin but within one month turned a tawny brown, a trait observed even when mothers bore children with English colonists, reflecting early colonial understanding of Native identity distinct from African descent; and

WHEREAS, Sir William Berkeley, Governor of Virginia, oversaw treaties and land arrangements prior to 1776, including the 1646 Articles of Peace and the 1677 Treaty of Middle Plantation, which shaped the reservation era and legal status of Virginia Indian communities including the Wiccocomico; and

WHEREAS, Robert Beverley, Jr., writing in 1705, stated that in Northumberland the Wiccocomico had but three men living who yet kept up their Kingdom, identifying Pinn, Taptico, and Conchinchimo as the remaining leaders maintaining Wiccocomico political continuity at the close of the seventeenth century; and

WHEREAS, Robert Pinn, identified in colonial records by Beckley and later recognized by the Virginia General Assembly, is acknowledged as the first and only documented patriarchal Weroance of the Virginia Wiccocomico and is the eighth great grandfather of Gail Janeen Smith Toliver; and

WHEREAS, colonial, court, and county records establish Robert Pinn as the only individual formally recognized by the Virginia government as King and Weroance of the Wiccocomico Indian Town, and further demonstrate that Robert Pinn remained alive and continued to appear in court and land-related proceedings concerning Wiccocomico reservation lands after the death of William Tapp II, also rendered Taptico, during which period Robert Pinn was subjected to racial reclassification in the records as a means of taxation and dispossession; and

WHEREAS, Rawley, also rendered Raleigh or Rolly, Pinn, the fifth great grandfather of Gail Janeen Smith Toliver, and his son Howison Pinn, her fourth great grandfather, appear in eighteenth and early nineteenth century records demonstrating continuity of family presence, landholding, and community identity in Northumberland County; and

WHEREAS, Traverse Benjamin Pinn, Sr. (1840–1888), the third great grandfather of Gail Janeen Smith Toliver and son of Howison Pinn, served honorably during the Civil War as a Union Army scout and wagoner and later contributed as an inventor and community leader, exemplifying the endurance of Wiccocomico descendants through war, reclassification, and dispossession; and

WHEREAS, court, county, and genealogical records further establish that Minnie Lee Pinn, born Minnie Lee Evans, was a descendant of the Wiccocomico, demonstrating that Wiccocomico continuity extended through interconnected families, including the Evans and Pinn lines, and that these families were collectively subjected to the same processes of racial reclassification and dispossession affecting the Wiccocomico Indian Town and its descendants; and

WHEREAS, the Pinn Cemetery in Northumberland County constitutes an ancestral burial ground and site of cultural continuity for Wiccocomico descendants, providing physical evidence of multigenerational presence tied to the historic Indian Town; and

WHEREAS, the General Assembly, through House Joint Resolution 644 (2011), House Joint Resolution 744 (2013), and Senate Joint Resolution 354 (2013), acknowledged historic Virginia Indian communities and recognized the need to address misclassification and erasure of Native identity; and

WHEREAS, the Acts of Assembly of 1997 provided statutory mechanisms to correct erroneous racial designations imposed under the 1924 Racial Integrity Act, enabling descendants of Virginia Indians to restore accurate identity in official records; and

WHEREAS, historical, genealogical, military, church, court, and legislative records associated with the
