6 WHEREAS, the Carroll County Historical Society hosted its final run of the historical play Thunder
7 in the Hills, which tells the story of the trial of Floyd Allen and the shooting in the Carroll County 8 Courthouse that left five dead and divided the community for decades to come; and

9 WHEREAS, Thunder in the Hills was written by Carroll County native Frank Levering, who worked 10 as a screenwriter in Hollywood before returning home to the Commonwealth to help care for his 11 family's orchard after his father became ill; and

12 WHEREAS, Frank Levering had always been fascinated by the story of the shoot-out inside the 13 Carroll County Courthouse, which traces its roots to 1910, when Floyd Allen, a local businessman and 14 alleged bootlegger, prevented law-enforcement officers from arresting his two nephews who had been 15 involved in a fight; and

16 WHEREAS, despite later bringing his nephews to the local jail himself, Floyd Allen was arrested for 17 obstruction and sentenced to one year of prison in a jury trial on March 14, 1912; as a sheriff
18 approached to lead him away, Floyd Allen, who was armed, refused to be taken, and while accounts
19 differ on who fired the first shot, the end result was a massacre, with the judge, the Commonwealth's 20 attorney, the sheriff, a juror, and a witness all killed; and

21 WHEREAS, Floyd Allen and his son, Claude, were both captured, tried, and executed at Virginia
22 State Penitentiary a year later, and several other members of the Allen family were sentenced to prison
23 but later pardoned; the shocking and tragic event caused a deep rift in the community for many years; 24 and

25 WHEREAS, as the centennial of the tragedy approached, Frank Levering worked with county
26 officials and the Carroll County Historical Society to author the two-act play, which was first performed 27 in 2012 as part of a commemoration that included speakers, symposiums, memorial tributes, and other 28 events to analyze and interpret the event; and

29 WHEREAS, Frank Levering himself performed in the play, along with former Delegate Tom 30 Jackson, who portrayed Floyd Allen, and a cast of nonprofessional local actors; the initial run was a hit, 31 with 12 sold-out shows at the historic 1873 Carroll County Courthouse, where the actual events took 32 place; and

33 WHEREAS, Thunder in the Hills returned for additional performances in 2016, 2018, and 2019 and 34 has been performed more than 50 times for nearly 6,000 people; proceeds have benefited the Carroll
35 County Historical Society's efforts to renovate and preserve historic sites in the area, including the Sidna
36 Allen House in Fancy Gap; and

37 WHEREAS, Thunder in the Hills has helped the community reconcile with the tragedy by providing 38 a unique, emotional interpretation of a story that has been passed down through generations; now, 39 therefore, be it
